SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS*Hospitalization Treated as a Temporary Absence

Hospitalization is generally considered to be a temporary absence from the home.

- The hospitalized spouse is considered to be living in the home with his/her Medicaid spouse during the hospital confinement.
- The hospitalized spouse's income and resources are considered when determining the Medicaid eligibility of the Medicaid spouse remaining at home.
- Refer to Chart 2503.1, Financial Responsibility for Medicaid Couples.

Hospitalization Treated as Full Separation of Spouses

Do not consider the income and resources of the hospitalized spouse beyond the month of hospital admission when determining the Medicaid eligibility of his/her spouse at home if the hospitalized spouse meets the length of stay (LOS) basic eligibility requirement.

The LOS requirement may be met by the hospitalization, or the hospitalization and a subsequent stay in another LA-D situation. Use this rule on separation even if the hospitalized spouse's eligibility is determined under ABD Medically Needy.

If the hospitalized/LA-D spouse returns home to live with his/her spouse after meeting the LOS requirement, resume considering the income and resources of the spouses jointly for purposes of determining Medicaid eligibility effective with the month following the month the hospitalized/LA-D spouse returns home.

NOTE: The income of the spouse is not considered if eligibility is determined under a COA that uses the Medicaid CAP as the income limit. Refer to Section 2510, Medicaid CAP Budgeting.

NOTE: Use the Spousal Impoverishment resource limit in determining the hospitalized/LA-D spouse's eligibility if the conditions for a full separation of spouses are met as outlined above.
